DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Applicant's election of Species I, Fig. 1 in the reply filed on January 14, 2005 is acknowledged. Because applicant did not distinctly and specifically point out the supposed errors in the restriction requirement, the election has been treated as an election without traverse (MPEP § 818.03(a)). Accordingly, claim 5 is withdrawn from further consideration.

Specification

2. The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because the implied language such as "The object of the present invention is to provide" should be avoided in the abstract. Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Takano et al. (hereinafter Takano).

Takano discloses a differential pressure control valve (see Figs. 2 and 3) of pilot-operated type for controlling a flow rate of fluid so that a differential pressure between inlet (10) and outlet (28) sides of the fluid may become equal to a differential pressure set by a value of electric current passed a solenoid thereof, characterized in that a diaphragm (67) is arranged at a sliding portion on an outer periphery of a main valve piston (64) for opening and closing a main valve element (65) of a main valve, to completely prevent the fluid from leaking through the sliding portion. The diaphragm, inherently, comprises a film shaped into annular form, the annular film having an inner peripheral edge portion clamped between the main valve piston and a fixing ring (66) secured to the main valve piston, and an outer peripheral edge portion clamped between a body containing the main valve piston and a cylindrical member (68) which is secured to the body and which slidably receives the main valve piston (see Fig. 3).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Takano as evidenced by Hopkins, Jr.

The Takano diaphragm is stretchable in a similar manner as that of the instant invention diaphragm; therefore, would inherently comprise a polyimide film. However, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the Takano diaphragm out of polyimide film as, for example, taught by Hopkins, Jr. (if not already).

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claim 4 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Saeki et al. disclose a differential pressure control valve (see Fig. 8) similar to that of the instant invention except for detail of the diaphragm and the clamping members. Kolze discloses a differential pressure control valve utilizes diaphragm.
